

Where to Submit: February + March 2017

written by Entropy | February 1, 2017

Sometimes I feel crazy submitting my writing in the middle of a national crisis. I have been coping by asking myself with every piece: "What is this doing for good? Why does it deserve to be in the world?" I hope if you ask yourself that question you come up with an answer that feels right.

Last post we included a section on Post-Election Calls for Submissions. This time we haven't. That's because all writing can be a form of resistance, regardless of where it appears or what it appears to address; the mags previously included in that section have been folded into the longer list below. If you still want an updated list of anti-Trump submission calls, however, see the Art/Writing section of Entropy's Trumpwatch. I also encourage you to check Trumpwatch daily for news, action items, and resources for self-care.

Our featured artwork this month is a page from a book made by Crane Giomo, creator of pocalypstic editions, a small press we interviewed for our Small Press Database last March. See the pocalypstic editions website for more of Crane's work.

As always, email Dennis James Sweeney (dennis@entropymag.org) with an entry formatted like the below if you would like your press or opportunity featured on future lists. Be safe. Be good to each other. Keep writing.
